

READINESS MANAGEMENT GROUP FACT SHEET

The Readiness Management Group (RMG) is a subset of the Air Force Reserve. Our mission is to ensure Individual Mobilization Augmentees (IMAs) and Participating Individual Ready Reservists (PIRR) are ready to be mobilized to meet the requirements of combatant commanders.

The RMG was established April 1, 2005 at the Air Reserve Personnel Center, Denver, Colo., and transferred to Robins Air Force Base, Ga., on July 1, 2005, to align administrative control of IMAs and PIRR within the Air Force Reserve Command.

The RMG provides a chain of command with accountability to the AFRC commander, and standardizes management of IMAs and PIRR.

Individual Mobilization Augmentees are assigned to funded positions at active-component organizations. PIRR are assigned to HQ Air Reserve Personnel Center and attached to active-component organizations. Reservists in both categories are trained to augment the active-component missions and are rated by active-duty component supervisors. The RMG shares administrative control of these reservists with the active-duty component supervisors.

The RMG shares administrative control of these reservists with the active-component and assists with personnel processes such as promotions and retirement which fall under the purview of the Air Force Reserve Command.

To be fully ready for mobilization, IMAs and PIRR must meet annual medical and dental requirements, have a current security clearance, and be fully qualified in their Air Force Specialty.
