AMERICA'S RESERVE CITIZEN AIRMEN

70 YEARS OF HONOR AND COURAGE

Letter from the Leadership

America's Air Force Reserve, an essential and integral component of the United States Air Force, faces a more complex and demanding environment than we have seen in generations. Great power competition has reemerged as the central challenge to U.S. prosperity and security and our relative advantage in air and space is under stress.

As a Major Command growing back to 70,000 Airmen, the Air Force Reserve stands ready, as a principle contributor in all Combatant Command areas of responsibility, and in response to those who challenge U.S. prosperity and security. As a Major Command with Airmen rich in combat experience and years of engagement in conflict zones, our strength is still our seasoned talent, steeped in experience and postured for ready response.

Aligned and postured with the National Defense Strategy, we are building an even more lethal and ready force, strengthening alliances and partnerships, and continuing to deliver greater, more affordable results across the domains of war. We are tailoring our Command to the right size and mix of agile capabilities to compete, deter, and win in joint and combined warfare.

SUPPORTING THE NATIONAL DEFENSE STRATEGY

America's Air Force Reserve budget request of $5.1 billion for Fiscal Year 2019 builds on the progress made in 2018 to amplify the readiness of the force, project lethality, and cost-effectively modernize. Sustaining these efforts requires predictable, sufficient, and flexible budgets.

In alignment with our Service and National Defense Strategy, our budget prioritizes long-term readiness supporting Air Force Reserve contributions in the Pacific and European theaters. Our Reserve focus continues to be readiness through theater specific training sets and weapon system modernization that addresses increased peer competition in today and tomorrow's battle space.

Associations with our Active Component remain the foundational organizational construct of our Air Force Reserve where two thirds of all Air Force associations reside. Associations ensure we continue to capture seasoned active airmen for continued service, leverage scarce resources in organizational efficiencies and improve our lethality through shared training and combat experiences. The bottom line is that Association models leverage unique strengths of each component to capitalize on recruitment, retention and readiness.

FOUNDATIONAL PRINCIPLES

Remain a prior-service focused, Reserve Citizen Airmen force.

We recruit prior-service experience in specialties supporting combat operations, resulting in increased readiness with low training costs. Our part-time Reserve Citizen Airmen make up 75% of our Air Force Reserve providing a fiscal savings for our Nation, at the same time delivering a fully trained combat ready Airmen.

Provide daily operational capability and strategic depth ensuring the Air Force retains its agility to respond to uncertainty.

America's Air Force Reserve always trains to the same standards and maintains the same level of readiness as the Active Component. We balance our baseline budget of a Strategic Reserve with the day-to-day operational demands of our force. We are in an age of constant global competition where the Air Force Reserve, while funded as a strategic resource, is essential as a daily operational contributor.

Remain a sustainable, professional force.

The Air Force Reserve sustains the force through flexible participation options enabling Reserve Citizen Airmen to contribute to the Nation's defense while their personal and professional lives may undergo change.

Leadership development will ensure our force remains a viable Component partner of the Joint Force.

The Air Force Reserve performs every core mission of the Air Force, ensuring the interoperability of Reserve and joint forces. Organizational structures and leadership positions integrate with the Active Component where it enhances mission capability, force sustainability and force effectiveness. The Reserve amplifies readiness and effective force management, resulting in an agile and combat-ready force.
