1. These are extraordinary times. National, state, and local COVID-19 pandemic responses have caused changes in how Americans live, work, and learn. This rapidly changing environment requires us to be flexible and agile. The Reserve Component has been called to assist our fellow citizens in unprecedented ways in the fight against this outbreak.
2. As the Air Force Reserve supports the national pandemic response, your Command Team wants to ensure you are aware of our priorities related to this outbreak. In alignment with higher level guidance, the Air Force Reserve COVID-19 response priorities are:
 - Take care of Americans, Airmen, and families
 - Continue mission essential operations and stand ready to execute our wartime tasks
 - Preserve decision space for commanders
 - Preserve the force
 - Ensure robust information flow up and down the chain
3. Our strategic depth is our strength. Our readiness ensures our response. Your resilient leadership guides us to success. Reserve Citizen Airmen from across the spectrum of Air Force specialties continue to volunteer and join our civilian teammates in taking care of Americans. Keep up the great work and let us know where we can assist you in meeting these priorities.
